Dear Sir:

I remember as a child reading about the Standard Oil Trust and how the monopoly was terrible for competition and the country. As a result, Standard Oil was broken up, so that the American way of fair competition could prevail.

Whether or not there is a direct correlation with the Microsoft case, it is obvious that Microsoft has become a totally corrupt and completely out of control monopoly. I read with utter disbelief the judge's Statement of Facts on the case. It was hard to believe that one company could do so many illegal activities and still be free to do more. The US government on previous occasions has simply slapped Microsoft on the wrist and allowed it to continue almost completely unchanged.

Now the justice department is about to do the very same thing. It is as if the justice department has not read the statement of facts. I would beg anyone involved with the case to watch Bill Gates taped testimony. I have never seen anything as sleazy. This was the president of the world's largest corporation, lying and covering up under oath.

I implore you to do something to stop Microsoft from its illegal and immoral attempts to dominate every corner of every market they deem important. Please do something to break the monopoly.

Sincerely,
Dr. Bruce Rogovin
